

Government Work Targets

Carolina Quality Air · NADCA source-removal scope only (ducts, coils, vents, dryer vents) · prepared August 21, 2026

Bottom line: four named opportunities exist right now on North Carolina's public portals that fit CQA's cleaning scope exactly, no refrigerant work, no equipment replacement. One is live with a clock on it (Green Road, pre-bid September 3). One is a forced recompetes of a duct cleaning and lining contract at a state prison 30 minutes from Raleigh (Johnston CI). Two are awarded term contracts where the play is a subcontract seat or pricing intel for the next round (UNCW, Wake County Schools). Every action below is an email, a phone call, or showing up to a meeting. Total cash outlay: zero.

The base rate matters: three direct duct-cleaning solicitations have hit the public portals in the last 26 months (NC A&T May 2024, Johnston CI July 2025, Wake Schools March 2026). This work exists on a recurring cycle. The only reason CQA hasn't bid it is that nobody was watching the portals when the three-week response windows opened.

| The scope line       | Item 2 of the project scope, verbatim: "Clean existing ductwork on existing units." Sits alongside replacement of six packaged units plus a split system (57 tons) and pre/post test-and-balance.                                                                                                                      |
| Why CQA              | The mechanical prime who wins this must deliver a duct cleaning line item most mechanical contractors don't self-perform. CQA quotes that line to every bidder; whoever wins, CQA works.                                                                                                                               |
| Next action          | Email Brad Felts at IMEG (Brad.W.Felts@imegcorp.com) requesting bidding documents, listed as Sub-Contractor; that puts CQA on the plan-holder list every prime sees. Attend the mandatory pre-bid, 1:00 PM Thursday Sept 3 at the site, and hand a duct-cleaning quote card to the mechanical contractors in the room. |

|-----------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Scope                | Source-removal cleaning (mechanical agitation, HEPA vacuum) plus antimicrobial lining of supply ducts and plenums in four dormitories and segregation, 794 Turnage Rd, Smithfield. Before/after photo documentation. Returns, repairs, and mold/asbestos excluded. NADCA compliance written into the spec.                                                       |
| Why it's coming back | One-year initial term with no renewal option in the contract. DAC cannot extend the incumbent; continuing the work requires a rebid. The current contract expires on roughly this timeline.                                                                                                                                                                      |
| What a bid takes     | Five prices (one per building), three similar-scope references, standard signed forms (HUB, financial self-cert, drug-free, PREA), upload via the Ariba Sourcing Tool. No bonding. Lowest responsive price wins. Original window was 21 days, site visit day 7.                                                                                                  |
| Next action          | Email Jeffrey Just, Procurement Specialist III, DAC (jeffrey.just@dac.nc.gov, 919-906-0879): introduce CQA as a NADCA-certified duct cleaning contractor with correctional facility experience, ask whether the Johnston requirement will be rebid, and request the bid tabulation from the 2025 award (public record). The tab shows who won and at what price. |
| Prerequisite         | Confirm CQA's eVP vendor registration is active with commodity code 721512 (HVAC construction & maintenance services) so the State's own alerts fire: vendor.ncgov.com                                                                                                                                                    |

AWARDED MARCH 2026 · SUBCONTRACT SEAT · RECURRING ANNUAL

|-----------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Contract       | RFP 72-BJTH26030, Commercial & Residential Laundry Services, UNC Wilmington. Awarded 3/26/2026, effective 6/15/2026.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Hidden scope   | The laundry equipment vendor is contractually required to clean every four-inch-plus rigid vent line annually at minimum, clean exterior grills semi-annually, and inspect dryer vent lines at least yearly, across 539 in-unit washer/dryer sets plus community laundry rooms in every residence hall. Bid Q&A confirms scope runs the entire line, unit to exterior, and that a bidder planned to subcontract exactly this work. |
| Why CQA        | A laundry equipment company holding a campus of annual vent cleaning it doesn't self-perform is a standing sub seat. CQA's Wilmington office makes it the local NADCA answer. Subcontractors require University consent, so the awardee needs a credible name to submit.                                                                                                                                                           |
| Next action    | Email Justin Hewett, UNCW Purchasing, asking who was awarded 72-BJTH26030 (award is public). Then one call to the awardee: CQA takes the annual vent cleaning scope, done in the May-July window the contract prescribes.                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| The multiplier | Same contract structure exists at UNC Charlotte (Bulk Laundry Services, awarded 2025), Western Carolina, and Fayetteville State. One relationship with a laundry vendor can carry CQA onto multiple campuses.                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

4. Wake County Public Schools Duct Cleaning Term Contract

AWARDED · HOME COUNTY · PRICING INTEL NOW, RECOMPETE NEXT CYCLE

|                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
|----------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Contract       | Bid 251-27-002, Environmental & Grounds Duct Cleaning, posted 3/17/2026, opened 4/22/2026, status Awarded. Term 7/1/2026 through 7/31/2027 with two optional one-year extensions.                                                                                                                                           |
| Structure      | On-call term work across the district, air handlers included in scope. Priced as a bid labor rate covering equipment and mileage, materials and disposal passed through at cost plus 10%.                                                                                                                                   |
| Why it matters | A standing duct cleaning contract for the school district CQA's own crews drive past daily. WCPSS rebids roughly 79 service contracts every spring as a batch, so this comes around on a knowable calendar.                                                                                                                 |
| Next action    | Email Clarence Rogers, WCPSS Purchasing (bids-crogers7@wcpss.net) for the 251-27-002 bid tabulation: who won and the labor rate. That number is the market price for institutional duct cleaning in CQA's home county, free. Then mark the WCPSS spring service-bid cycle (pre-bids run early April) to bid the next round. |

What all four need from CQA (once, reusable forever)

Active eVP registration under commodity code 721512. City of Raleigh vendor registration. A one-page capability statement (NADCA membership since 2000, ASCS on staff, correctional and healthcare experience, insurance summary). Three written references from the best similar-scope jobs. Current COI. Assembled once, this kit turns any of these responses into an afternoon of work instead of a lost week, and it is the same kit every future solicitation will ask for.
